

Academic Integrity

1 Why is it important?

Academic integrity is fundamental to all scholarly activity. Everyone at university must conduct themselves with honesty and integrity. As you build your academic integrity skills, you're preparing for your career!

2 What is it?

"A commitment to six fundamental values: honesty, trust, fairness, respect, responsibility, and courage."¹

3 What can you find on the web?

Information and tools to work with academic integrity, identify and avoid the pitfalls of academic misconduct and understand the consequences of misconduct.

4 Who's involved in academic integrity matters?

We all play a role. You need to know course and academic unit expectations and professors need to communicate specific course expectations.

Feel free to ask questions! It's much better to clear up uncertainties and be sure you're working with integrity.

Want to learn more?

See our resources to help you foster a culture of academic integrity at uOttawa.

¹ International Center for Academic Integrity

