Associate Professor Dr. Mary Cavanagh has been appointed as Director of  ESIS for a three-year term beginning July 1, 2020.

Dr. Alexandre Fortier, Metadata and Taxonomy Librarian at the Library of Parliament, was appointed as an adjunct professor in  ESIS effective July 1, 2020.

Mr. Ross Gordon, Director of Records and Information Management at Environment and Climate Change Canada, began a one-year term in the school as Public Servant in Residence on August 1, 2019.

Student body

Fourteen new students enrolled in the Master of Information Studies (MIS) program and five in the Graduate Diploma in Information Management (GDIM) program for 2019-2020, joining another twenty-five continuing MIS students and one continuing GDIM student, for a total enrolment of forty-five in the school's programs.

Our Priorities

In November 2019 a long-range planning workshop was held to review program goals and priorities for the 2018/19–2021/22 planning cycle. Those goals and priorities stem in part from the prioritized areas for improvement and enhancement identified in the self-study that was conducted for the cyclical review of our programs in 2015-2016; in part from the initiatives proposed in the school's input to the Faculty of Arts strategic plan, Roadmap for Arts 2030, in 2017; as well as from a review of priorities and implementation plans that was initiated in December 2018.

The school's strategic goals for the planning period are:

- To increase enrolment in the MIS and GDIM programs
- To enrich the student experience through refinement of the curriculum
- To maintain the MIS program's accreditation status
- To maintain the MIS program's post-degree employment rate

For the purposes of program planning, the school identifies its priorities under five key areas of focus: curriculum and the student experience; research development; resources and leadership; community engagement; and marketing and visibility. During the 2019-2020 academic year, significant progress was made on a number of priorities in each of those areas of focus, as noted below.

Curriculum and student experience

Changes have been made to the MIS CO-OP option, effective May 1, 2020, to align it with university-wide practices. Under those changes, credits attached to the two CO-OP work terms no longer count as credits toward the MIS degree. To offset that change, credits are now given to the applied research projects associated with the CO-OP work terms. The net effect, however, is that the total number of credits earned for the combined works terms and applied research projects in the CO-OP option have been reduced from 12 to 6.

To partially offset the reduction in credits earned for the CO-OP component, the total number of credits required for the degree has been reduced from 48 to 45 for all options (course-based, CO-OP, and thesis) by eliminating one compulsory course from the curriculum. We will be monitoring the impact on the overall program both of the changes to the CO-OP option and the reduction in the number of credits required for the degree.

Research development

Assistant Professor Stefanie Haustein was awarded a grant from the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation worth over $280,000 in Canadian funds for research on meaningful data counts.

Full Professor Lynne Bowker, cross-appointed to ÉSIS, was awarded a Social Sciences and Humanities Council (SSHRC) grant of $72,000 to investigate how machine translation can help to level the linguistic playing field for international research.

Associate Professor André Vellino is collaborating on a new project funded by Innovation, Science and Economic Development Canada researching the application of smart voice technology and custom AI to help persons with cognitive and mental-health-related disabilities participate in the digital economy.

Adjunct Professor Jada Watson is collaborating on a new project funded by SSHRC studying the literary, musical, and historical significance of Christina Rossetti's poetry in music-literary collaborations.

Community engagement

Ross Gordon, Director of Information Management Services at Environment and Climate Change Canada, joined the school's faculty for the 2019-2020 academic year under the Public-Servant-in-Residence program. During his residency, Mr. Gordon co-taught the elective course on Knowledge in Organizations and the capstone case problem course. In addition, he conducted research on information management trends and technologies in the Government of Canada and facilitated further interaction between students and faculty in our MIS program and other key players in the information management field within the federal public service.

Resources and leadership

Hélène Carrier completed her third term as Interim Director of ÉSIS at the end of June 2020. Associate Professor Mary Cavanagh has been appointed to serve a three-year term as Director of ÉSIS beginning July 1, 2020.

Adjunct Professor Tom Delsey was appointed as accreditation coordinator for a period of sixteen months beginning in May 2019. The position was funded on a part-time basis by the Faculty of Arts in recognition of the importance of the accreditation process to our program as well as the extra work that this entails for our school.

Marketing and visibility

ÉSIS received funding from the Faculty of Arts to hire a student from the work-study program to work on the school's promotional material and website.

Teaching and Learning

CO-OP assignments

Twelve students were accepted into the competitive co-operative education option, which includes two four-month full-time work placements in the field. Employers for the May-December 2019 CO-OP placements included:

Administrative Tribunal Support Services of Canada	Library of Parliament
Canadian Medical Association (Joule)	National Research Council
Carleton University Library	New Brunswick Public Library Services
Commonwealth War Graves Commission	Ottawa Hydro
Federal Public Sector Labour Relations and Employment Board	Public Service Commission
Indigenous and Northern Affairs Canada	Shopify
Innovation Science and Economic Development Canada	Statistics Canada
Library and Archives Canada	University of Ottawa - Information Technologies

The employers gave top ratings—exceptional or excellent—to the students’ performance in all twenty-four CO-OP assignments.

Capstone projects

The Case Problem capstone experience offers students an opportunity to demonstrate their skills and knowledge in a broad range of professional competencies. Students work in teams to solve a problem in information studies specified by their instructors. The Case Problem presents a challenge relating to the management of information resources or the creation of a service and sets the problem in a political, cultural, economic, organizational and technological contexts. Students address the problem by producing outputs such as a problem analysis, an environmental scan, best-practices recommendations, and a prioritized plan to achieve the objectives.

The projects for the Winter 2020 capstone experience included the following:

- Archiving Social Media at Library and Archives Canada
- Indigenous Rights and the Duty to Consult at Library and Archives Canada
- The future of the Federal Science Library
- Developing communication/training strategies for the Information Management Division at Environment and Climate Change Canada
- Creative Spaces for the new Central Ottawa Public Library
- Organisation des collections à la Bibliothèque de Gatineau

Student research assistants

ÉSIS student Alyssa Jeffrey was a research assistant for Professor Stefanie Haustein’s project on metric literacy.

ÉSIS student David Bynoe was a research assistant for Professor Sylvie Grosjean’s project on the role of technologies in health care programs.
