

Eric CHAMPAGNE is an Associate Professor of Public Administration at the School of Political Studies and Director of the Center on Governance at the University of Ottawa

Professor Champagne specializes in public management and governance.

His teaching focuses on public management, governance, program evaluation, the formulation and implementation of public policies as well as globalization and continental integration. His current researches focus on performance management in the public sector, on multi-level governance in the financing and implementation in the areas of transport, infrastructure and public safety policies as well as the impact of new digital technologies on the transformation of public governance (smart cities, organizational agility, open government, big data analytics systems).